

Finally! A Jewish Day Camp for Intown Atlanta

IN THE CITY NOW MAKING CONVENIENT CAMP POSSIBLE FOR COMMUNITY

SPECIAL FOR THE AJT

The days of schlepping your kid across town for camp are over! In the City Camp at Emory is Atlanta's only co-ed, intown, Jewish day camp for kids ages 5-14.

Now entering its third summer, In the City Camp provides the exciting activities, creates the lifelong friendships, and facilitates the character-building experience of Jewish overnight camp – and lets your child sleep at home.

Lemons to lemonade (or perhaps bugs to bug juice?)

By the summer of 2011, In the City Camp executive director, Eileen Snow Price, was tired of schlepping her four kids across town each day to attend Jewish summer camp. But, as a former JCC day camper and Camp Barney Medintz camper and counselor, she understood how valuable a Jewish camp experience was for her kids.

Unable to find a co-ed intown Jewish day camp that captured the best parts of the summer experience she had and wanted for her kids, Eileen did what any good Jewish mom would do – she started her own camp.

By the camp's second summer in 2012, it was clear the community had embraced it when 100 kids attended each week. Some were even coming from the 'burbs.

An incredible intown facility

In the City Camp is located on Emory University's beautiful campus in Atlanta's Druid Hills neighborhood. Campers have access to Emory's state-of-the-art facilities including an Olympic-size pool, beautifully manicured fields, and an impressive climbing wall.

As you will hear if you check out the fantastic video on camp's website, that pretty much makes it the Harvard of summer camps.

Activity choice and field trips

At In the City Camp, both Kid campers (ages 5-10) and Tween campers (ages 11-14) choose the sports, art, and music activities they participate in each day and take a field trip off-campus every week.

Campers hike Stone Mountain, volunteer at the Food Bank, and jump on the giant trampolines at Sky Zone. Additionally, Tween Campers experience at least one overnight activity each week.

A staff committed to Judaism and Israel

In the City Camp wants to ensure that each camper connects with Judaism and Israel while they experience all the traditional camp activities like swimming, basketball, arts & crafts, and singing.

To make sure that happens, all of the camp's counselors are Jewish. Camp also will welcome four Israeli staff members this summer.
